“Aromas of plum, cherries, lemons and lavender. Hints of cedar, too. Light to medium body, firm and tight tannins and a vibrant finish. Delicious now.”

“Not a mere whole-cluster wine, the Stalker is made by drying the stalks separately and adding them to whole berries. It’s slightly chalky as a result, with a green edge to the tannins and green tea flavors. Black cherry, espresso and cacao components also factor in.”

- Paul Gregutt, 11/17

“Lurid red. A sexy, highly perfumed bouquet evokes fresh black raspberry, cola and floral pastille scents, along with woodsmoke and Asian spice flourishes. Stains the palate with sweet, concentrated red and dark berry and spice cake flavors that show a suave blend of power and finesse.”-Josh Reynolds, 1/18
